Embedded at the Front: The Soul of the War, & Now It Can Be Told Philip Gibbs

Two full length works collected in one edition formatted for the Kindle.

Sir Philip Gibbs [1877-1962] was a British news reporter and writer of fiction and nonfiction. In his teenage youth he aspired to become a writer. In 1894, he published his first article in the Daily Chronicle. In 1899, he published his first book Founders of the Empire. He worked as the literary editor at Daily Mail. He later worked for other newspapers including the Daily Express. In 1914 at start of the war, he reported on the Western Front while a volunteer in the British Ambulance Service at Ypres. The War Office instituted a policy that reporters must receive permission to be in the war zone. Gibbs did not obtain permission to remain, was arrested and sent back to England. The Government permitted five correspondents to go to the Front — Gibbs, now compliant with protocol, was one of those chosen. In addition to news articles during the war, he also published several books: The Soul of the War (1915), The Battle of the Somme (1917), and From Bapaume to Passchendaele (1918). After the war, he was knighted for his wartime service. In 1920, he published Now It Can Be Told detailing his frustrations with the War Office's attempt to "manage" news from the Front, and his criticisms of British army commanders.
