How to Make 'Em Book Erector Hudson Locomotive Set. No. A The A.C. Gilbert Company

A.C. Gilbert marketed his first construction set under the name “Erector” in 1913. The innovative toy became extremely popular. In 1931, the company released a set featuring over a hundred new engineering parts. “Set A” and its sister sets #8, #8½ and #10 allowed the construction of a New York Central Hudson Locomotive and Tender. This static model could be outfitted with an electric motor capable of operating the driving wheels and valves. A much-desired toy in its day, the set eluded all but the luckiest children. Today it remains rare and highly collectible. This reproduction of the original instruction book from Set A was originally printed in 1931. It shows all the Hudson’s parts, and has complete assembly instructions for it and twelve other engine-type models. The word “Erector” and the “Erector Set” are trademarks of Meccano S.N. and Nikko America. All rights reserved.
