Chords, words and some news from times long past Barry Högström

If the economic recession and personal shortcomings have ever made you wonder what the world has come to and why people's lives end up in shambles or success seemingly without any doing of their own, this thrilling story about love, death and foul play on many levels, spanning life on two continents and more than 50 years is for you. The story starts in small town blue color Sweden and ends in the business quarters of New York City. It's a story about a changing world and about good people doing bad things and bad things happening to good people, in love and in life, in what is private and in the executive offices of New York, and it is a story about history finally catching up with us all--in more ways than one. Some of the main characters never learn, some finds a good life were they never would have purposely looked, and not all of them live to tell.
